The NUSpace project is the University of Newcastle's new $95 million inner city campus. EJE collaborated with Melbourne firm Lyons Architecture, winning the university's design competition with a design that provides a great gathering space for the University and a catalyst for remaking both the physical and cultural heart of the City of Newcastle, adding life to the inner city. NUSpace provides spaces for students, academics and the community to meet and gather in a variety of ways, both formally and informally - and many places where students can self organise to create their own sense of a campus community.
